

APPGC 'Cancer across the Domains' public consultation

The All Party Parliamentary Group on Cancer (APPGC) is a group of cross party parliamentarians who aim to keep cancer at the top of the parliamentary agenda. This year, our programme of work is focusing on NHS England.

NHS England was set up as part of the health reforms and formally took control of overseeing NHS services in April 2013. It is split into five 'domains', which focus on improving health and reducing health inequalities. The APPGC think each domain has a role to play in improving cancer services, outcomes and experience.

The APPGC is producing a report setting out what we think should be the cancer priorities for each of the individual domains. To help shape the report, we're collecting the views of people who have an interest in the way cancer services are delivered in the NHS through a consultation.

Please fill in this interactive document by typing text into the designated spaces. Once completed please save the document and email it to farah.pasha@collegepublicpolicy.com We would be grateful if you could email your response by midnight on 31st August 2013.
